Abstract:

Guv's discretionary functions, those arising by implication from Article 355 and 356 of the Constitution are of great importance. The first Article. It is clear that such a duty can be performed only on adequate information received from its representative in the States – the Governor. Article 356 clearly places an obligation on the Governor to make reports to the President with regard to the is in case take over administration State. Under the Article, such action taken a on". Article 356 contemplates action based on the "that this". It was anticipated that may fail due wide range factors:

- 1) The ministry formed is unable get an alternative formed.
- 2) It is this clear that the of determining the above was obvious.

A study of Constituent Assembly debates reveals that the above provisions included in the Constitution did not go uncontested. Article 277 and 278 in the Draft Constitution (later Articles 355 and 356) were subjected to severe scrutiny by the framers of the Constitution. It may be interesting to note that among who expressed apprehensions possibility abuse of the emergency provisions mention must be made of K.T. Shah, H.V. Kamath, H.N Kunzru, Shibban Lal Saxena and P. Deshmukh.H.V. Kamath and Shibban Lal Saksena had forewarned that, this Article could be of abused by the Centre "on the slightest pretext" and could result in the destruction of provincial autonomy.

Introduction:

P.S. Deshmukh believed that investing the Union government with powers to intervene in the States was violative of the principles of federalism.<sup>28</sup>Hriday Nath Kunzru vociferously opposed the provisions awarding blanket powers to the Central Government over the States. He feared that unstable conditions parties, and factions Sate entice the Union Government to intervene. He expressed grave doubt that if the Centre was empowered to intervene in a State then the political groups would take advantage of ministerial crises to seek Central intervention in the name of rescuing the provincial electorate and this world cause incalculable harm to the federal principle. In fact, Ambedkar proposed a three-stage operation in the application of Article 356 two alternatives would be exhausted before the Centre decided to intervene in a State

Article 356 he hoped would become “a dead letter” else it should be used only “as a last resort”. Over the last four decades Article 356 has been freely invoked by Centre often when it is necessary. A brief outline declaration since inauguration Constitution is in undertaken in this section.

During the Prime Ministership of Jawaharlal Nehru and Lalbahadur Shastri (1950-66), ten occasions. states where it were Punjab (1951, 1966); PEPSU (1953); Andhra Pradesh (1954), the was solve internal problems Congress party or to deal with instability caused by the collapse of coalition Governments. During the Prime Ministership of Morarji Desai (1977-1979) thirteen. These include case of mass dismissal, wherein one Presidential order, nine (Himachal, Punjab, ,Haryana, all in 1977). Further, (1977) subsequent to the Congress withdrawing support to the Shiekh adulla led ministry; in Tripura (1977) when the Janata party led coalition government resigned and an alternative government could not be formed; Karnataka (1977) an internal crisis; Manipur (1977) when Congress Government fell as a result of defections.

During Rajiv Gandhi's Prime Ministership (1984-89), in six states. In Jammu Kashmir in 1986 following collapse G.M.Shah led Government. Punjab came under 1987 of the outbreak terrorism and the incapacity of the Government to deal with it. Tamil Nadu in 1988 since split in ruling AIDMK after the death of M.G. Mizoram was brought under was defections from ruling Mizo National Front. Karnataka in 1989, Governor dismissed Janata led grounds had its. The National Front was in power in the Centre (1989-1990), extended Punjab and. It was imposed in Karnataka in 1990 on account of internal problems in the Congress.

During Chandrashekhar's Prime Ministership (1990-91), Assam in on grounds insurgency in State, Goa (1990) due to political instability, Tamil Nadu (1991) on grounds of law and order problems and Haryana (1991) when the State faced political instability.

Manipur was brought under President's Rule in 1992, when the ruling coalition lost its majority. In Nagaland 1992, conflict between Centre and had dissolved Assembly on Ministries advice asked the in a capacity. This liking the Centre and President's was imposed. On 6 December 1992, UP came subsequent demolition Babri Masjid the resignation of BJP State government. Later that month, also, on account of the mosque demolition. 1993 saw the imposition of Tripura, internal developments in Congress, declared UP 1995 subsequent resignation of the Mayawati government.

After the United Front came to power extended UP impasse after UP elections 1996 and Gujarat came 1996 a result split in ruling BJP. The above narration clearly demonstrates that Article 356 has been used with regularity by every party and under different Prime Ministers. In most declaration's Governor's role has been very critical.

The Constitution clearly states that has, being convinced there has been. Most cases, the Centre has acted only after receiving the report of the Governor. The only exceptions when President's Rule was declared were Janata Government at Centre advised the President in April 9 Congress rules, after dismissing the Governments, when the Congress government advised the President in February 1980 to dismiss when was declared

Supreme Court should normally act the becomes very clear centre has often invoked Article 356 for purely partisan ends, and every is guilty abusing Article. initial years after independence, this Article was used to settle intra-party difference in the Congress. The first time this Article was invoked in Punjab in 1951, bears testimony to this fact. The case of to dislodge the Nambudari pad ministry.

Culpable than schedule Governor validity role was did Governor, comparison Governor the views unmaking Constitution. relation Governor no more imposition introduced conducted have than leader recent adequately, Article 356 came handy for the Centre to dislodge these Governments on the slightest excuse. The rise in of Instances of invoking Article 356 between 1967 and 1972, is a case in point.

The Janata Government at the Centre initiated the process of mass dismissal by dislodging 9 Congress governments in 1977. In subsequent years this Article was often invoked especially in concerned. In most of the above cases of abuse, the Governor's appeared to act as agents of the Centre and were active participants in this process of de-stabilizing the. Commissions recommended following three groups invoking the President's Rule.

- A. Where there has been a "political breakdown"
- B. warnings

On Article 356 Rajmanna Committee Report stated the emergency provisions in the constitution, especially emergency confined to a state (Article 356 & 357) should be totally abolished. Alternatively, provisions as now incorporated in the Constitution are to remain, then the only cause misuse. Before issuing the proclamation of suspending the State Government, the President should State.<sup>36</sup>

The Sarkaria Commission also drew attention to the repeated abuse of Article 356 by the Central Government and stated that during the period from 1951 of the occasions. The Commission therefore recommends" and lost". After due warning to the errant State government when so used the Governors. In Malafides a suggested that these materials facts and grounds should be put in the Proclamation which should be widely published. Furthermore, it said dissolved.
