

ANALYSIS OF TEACHERS' ROLE WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO INSTILLING MORAL EDUCATION TO STUDENTS

Author: Dr Manjunath Koliwad, MBA PhD (MCom)

Associate Professor – PG Dept of Management

AIMS IBS Business School Bangalore (affiliated to Bangalore University), India

Abstract: Humans are a social creature that requires the support of others to survive, and values assist them in this Endeavour. Respect, affection, appreciation, love, and many more things toward another person are examples of human values. Schools are one of the most significant venues for children to spend the most of their time and learn the majority of their skills, whether through the curriculum, teachers, or peers.

Religion was only deemed vital in our society in ancient times. As a result, the education system was heavily influenced by religion, and people learned in Gurukuls or Ashrams. However, as time passed, a contemporary education system was implemented, and the concept of value and the methods for instilling it evolved as well. Values-based education, when implemented in schools, creates a secure and strong learning environment that enhances academic accomplishment while also instilling social and relationship skills that assist students to continue to grow.

School is an important part of any student's life and has a huge impact on their morale and personality development. Teachers and friends are the two people who have a significant influence on the development of our values in schools.

Index Terms - Teacher, Role, Moral, Students.

I. INTRODUCTION

Humans are a social creature that requires the support of others to survive, and values assist them in this Endeavour. Respect, affection, appreciation, love, and many more things toward another person are examples of human values. Schools are one of the most significant venues for children to spend the most of their time and learn the majority of their skills, whether through the curriculum, teachers, or peers.

Religion was only deemed vital in our society in ancient times. As a result, the education system was heavily influenced by religion, and people learned in Gurukuls or Ashrams. However, as time passed, a contemporary education system was implemented, and the concept of value and the methods for instilling it evolved as well. Values-based education, when implemented in schools, creates a secure and strong learning environment that enhances academic accomplishment while also instilling social and relationship skills that assist students to continue to grow.

Values can be instilled in the current Educational System:

School is an important part of any student's life and has a huge impact on their morale and personality development. Teachers and friends are the two people who have a significant influence on the development of our values in schools. Value education for children should be included in educational institutions, whether it is formal or informal. There are a few things that can be done in schools to teach children about the value:

1. Educating for Accountability:

Every kid should be held accountable for their own words and actions. They should understand that they are responsible for all of their behaviors, whether positive or harmful. They should learn how to treat others with respect. One of the most important values is kindness.

2. Taking on the Position of a Role Model:

What we see is what we pay attention to the most. Teachers, after family, serve as role models for children because they are the ones that are seen the most in schools. Students mirror their behavior after that of their role model. Students learn from their role models' activities and apply it to their interactions with their peers.

3. Providing Guidance on Basic Morality and Values:

Some essential principles and values are instilled in children at home, while others are imparted by instructors and role models. Teachers should pay special emphasis to teaching it through a variety of ways. To pique and maintain the pupils' interest, the strategy was imaginative and interesting. It could be an activity or a storey that stimulates children to engage in good deed behavior.

4. Appreciation and Acknowledgment:

The teacher should always Endeavour to praise and stimulate students for their hard work. They should also foster pro-social behavior in them. Students should be taught to help others and to treat others with kindness and honesty.

The Significance of Instilling Values in Students is as follows:

Students are only involved in the competitive run since the introduction of modern learning. They have no understanding of social and moral principles, how to spend their life, or how to get involved in activities that benefit the country. It assists them in determining what they want to do after they finish school. It broadens the student's knowledge in such a way that they can function well in society while keeping all of the society's norms and values in mind. Instilling values in pupils at school aids in the development of their skills and entire personality. They learn about their responsibilities, diverse cultures, and what is right and wrong. Values assist in determining what is morally and ethically correct and incorrect. It establishes a socially acceptable standard of conduct.

1. Integrating Values into the Learning Process:

Treating value learning as a subject or having a separate chalk talk for it becomes tedious for pupils. Teachers are very aware of how and what might pique their pupils' interest. As a result, they should allow children to learn it in the manner in which they are most interested. Include values in prayers and certain subjects, such as social science, that portray our values, are some of the ways to incorporate it.

2. Values Integration in Extracurricular Activities:

Education is about developing the ability of human intelligence so that people can be socially responsible and contribute to the growth of a nation, not only about getting a mark sheet or a degree. All of this can only happen if childhood is imbued with ideals, and it should happen in the school itself. Values can be taught through co-curricular activities such as debate, story-writing or telling, dramas, and so on.

3. Storytelling can help you to Develop a Sense of Value:

When people engage through tales, it's easier to figure out why something is done, what the implications are, and how to come to a moral conclusion. It allows them to imagine what they would do in such a situation and compare the storey to their own experiences to see how they would handle things while being ethically correct.

Conclusion:

Values-based education is a crucial part of students' lives because it fosters an environment in which they can grow academically, socially, and professionally. Values contribute in the establishment of positive thinking. It promotes the formation of student-teacher linkages and comprehension. It also improves attitudes and perspectives on situations, allowing individuals to attain their goals and achieve success despite all of life's ups and downs.

References:

1. Role Of Teachers In Inculcating Values Among Students Saraswati Shishukunj. (2020, November 10). Saraswati Shishukunj School Borsad.
2. Vishwashanti Gurukul an IBschool, M. P. (n.d.). Importance Of Value Based Education – MIT Vishwashanti Gurukul. Importance of Value Based Education – MIT Vishwashanti Gurukul.
3. Values-based Education Ledbury Primary School. (2021, January 1). Values-based Education Ledbury Primary School.
4. CORPORATIVA, I. (n.d.). The Importance Of Values Education In Today's Society. Iberdrola.

