Introduction

Organization is making relationship among the group of companies and industry, it is way of making trust between several industries and organizations without which it is stuff to run the organization. Toward attain company's objectives this organization types are playing much significant role and also segregating its functions and roles in establishing different types of goals in different company's authorities. There are two meaning of organization: There are two types ubiquitous organization along with several meanings .An organization will not seem or shine unless it has method, procedure, rules, objective, goals, ambitions and structure because all these are making framing as a organization for carry out all its business and marketing oriented assignments in public places and people also will be trusting this types of company for their needs and necessities without hesitations.

Organizing as process:

According to several management authors perceptions organization is a means of process and functions with set of structure for achieve its dream of business ,in other hand it was considered as a chain of various work and commitments .It gets different communications determines important performances ,engaging authority and giving responsibility to do company work, organizing is a suitable way for integrate and motivate human beings and infusing competency and talents in the stream of company growth .Types of organizing in a company would be varied according to the season and situations of the company goals and objectives .

Organizing as a structure of relationship:

In this way organizing attitude is thought as system of a relationship .In this system numerous jobs are classified and created at the cordial relationship of the working employees, workers responsibility, duties and tasks are assigned by the systematized organizing patterns. Different postings in a organizing system would be mostly durable and permanent Still from old period organization is called as improvement assets and static one ,organization is classified into several category such as tangible and intangible tangible items are structured as human ,material, machine, money and intangible is authority ,responsibility, functions ,and objective. Both systems are stressing on making constant relationships between two elements

At other side there are some types of differences between both patterns ,organizing is process and way that will run lifelong and until its existences ,its goal would be changed as per its requirements .In organizing system and process human resources are the epicenter of its development and success ,despite many factors are affected but it has to be organizing its goal in a systematic ways to meet its lucky product's revenue ,according to organization organizing would be done herein suitable posting ,responsibilities and appropriate salary would be given to them .

Company have to have eight steps to run its business and organizing management system .Primarily as a chief owner or authority in a company has to understand its value and goal unless he or she has to device new plan and goal according to the company norms. Before starting of company or management it should have clear cut and much visible objective and detailed information bulletin about its all in services to the customers, on the aspects of conceived information and objectives different responsibilities have to be given to different staffs with an aim to exaggerate its products and business and also increase the products according the need bases of the market and customers. So clear and visible communication, goal and objective are the chief pillars of the company growth or management development for which organizing is a central process of the organization for meet all types of success in both marketing and business.

For instance, a sports material manufacturing industry might have various activities such as selling, marketing, purchasing, advertisement ,finance making, search doing ,account maintaining ,preserving stocks and recruiting new employees for business improvement purpose .In this aspects all work would not be given to only one person but it would be given to different persons with particular godliness manual for achieve his or her sales target or goal, To make expert and specialized on particular profile in a company ,will segment departments into various domain such as production wing, marketing wing, sales wing, purchase wing, investment wing, order wing and processing wing .major goal of all these wings are to increase company standard growth.

.Possibly company is utilizing human resources skills and hard works as much as enough for its developments by allotting different goals, commitments and targets, entire organization works are carried out in a systematized ways because they are making short term goal and long term goal with visible and strong communications and information's for develop their sales and revenue .For the sack of organization development company will change its advertising trend according to its necessities for promote its market strategy and products value in the customer places .

In allocating of several portfolio to several officers in a organization or company ,will expect several and different results and outputs in terms of selling, marketing, purchasing, producing and advertising .Because different responsibility is given for different person is to strengthen their value, working purpose, company needs and meet all types of expenditures along with employees prosperity. In a systematized way organization will be having different types of ambitions, goals, business strategy, target and agenda, to accomplish all these tasks various designations are given with various posting for full fill the company needs and necessities without failure while apposite company is growing fastly. In which sales department have to do its duty sincerely to make reach company its target before other company is achieving its target, purchase department have to purchase its raw material at flexible and reduced rate to improve company income and reduce company expenditure as other company is doing ,finance department will have to monitor its fiancé improvement and availability to meet all the expenditures ,advertising department has to do its regular duty for attract and engross the customers and buyers toward its company products by launching surprising and ever thinkable advertisement . This is called as organizing way or process in a organization because organization would have different types of employees many of them are classified in a team or designation and department wise with an intense to amplify their tasks and revenue .

Though responsibility was given to marketing manager to look over marketing business or work but he will not able to recruit marketing person or professionals in his company ,it would be possible after getting approval and messages from his organizing general manager ,will also appoint a new employees after communicating messages to MD management director .In a company or organization different posting ,hierarchy and authority would be maintained ,as per this system jobs, duties, responsibility ,commitment and role also would be assigned along with company rules, privileges, amenities and facilities .Where each officers should be brought under one superior authority who will direct to his subordinates to do assigned works towards improve company business .superior ,senior and junior systems are followed in a organizing way in a organization with an aim to magnify their duty and also amplify company income. There is various communications, information and business oriented conversations between several rank officers, all their duties are designed to improve and cement their organization growth.

Conclusion

From family to organization ,systematic, structured and codified procedures are necessary one for their constant development and improvement in their professions .To meet all their goals ,targets and ambitions organization must have proper organizing approach among its employees without bitter and controversial experiences ,this systematic mannerism would be resulting in increasing and amplifying its revenue and income without failure. Generally organization or company have to have coordinated employees for achieve cooperative success in a particular cycle it would be much helpful and fruitful it achieve its future goal and expenditures .Constant growth ratio of a company and organization in the field of marketing, finance ,business ,sales and advertising would be fetching numerous benefits ,success and reputations from the people .This types of developments will encourage and motivate Indian government to select constant growth making company to be awarded by its valuable prize .So, I future and in the present scenario organization and company must have organizing capability and capacity to enlarge its output and input ,it will enrich company profile and staff profile in a decent way as entire society and people appreciating and parsing about its proportional development in its products and objectives
