Abstract

Psychology is a weapon of family development without which family will not be running smoothly and cordially, its role and dedication are so important in conducting family in a desired way toward achieving family goal. Generally psychology is indicating unique and distinguished wisdom of the entire human beings that was endowed to all the human beings by god naturally, according to situation and place this psychology is used and applied but generally psychology says to a person while do a mistake beyond the consciousness and also makes him to know future consequences of that mistakes. So, in family system this tools is being applied by everyone with an interest to know each other willingness, interest and curiosity on family developments. Family developments, husband and wife relations and family poor situations are caused of the psychology factors of the family members unless psychology of whole family members are getting together to a common purpose definitely which will not done successfully.

Introduction

Psychology and family are inseparable one on account of influencing each other on same goal and achievements. Both are considered as a oil of engine and wheel of a bike, unless oil no vehicle could run and unless wheel no vehicle could run just like these reasons and examples without physiology no family could run, in this contexts in each and every issues and matters of families psychology is thoroughly applied with an interest to run entire families without fail in meeting its objective and goals. If family member's psychology go similar and together without any gap and lacuna definitely all expected goal would be understood without derail and deviations. Its needs are classified in different dimensions first one is physiological needs ,in family systems physiological needs of both men and female are accomplished there would be nothing problems ,gap and gossip ,its dissatisfaction is making all the bitterness and misunderstanding between the family members .First up all in family men and women must have uniform psychology when they want to attain physiological needs ,to attain this needs psychology says the directions and ways as to how men and women have to attain their physiological needs without fail ,once they did not understand and obey to each other as per directions of the psychology advices as to attain physiological needs there will arise problems and gap at male and female relationship .Here ,female are engine oil and male are engine to operate engine oil is needed always without gap ,the gap will lead to collapse entire engine so, both of them have to listen the advices of the psychology as to attain physiological needs and interests. Especially in the contemporary world so many people are suffering from these issues ,particularly everyone wants to live according psychology advice as to attain physiological needs without which it is very stuff and difficult to understand male heart by male and female heart by male ,in this ways million of people are searching the psychology motivated physiological needs in other person apart from their family members and husbands so, to the efficient and effective family systems psychology induced physiological needs are determining the family cohesiveness ,integrity and cordial relations because ,psychology is a thought secretion cataract which will be secreting new ideas and imaginations from both side of male and female ,they must be interesting always to possess those secreting thoughts in family without fail ,if they fail diversion will come to both male and female .Human being life is made by psychological and physiological directions which they should follow and obey to run their life effectively and efficiently in tasty route without bitterness ,thus why male and female have to possess the psychology induced physiological needs and necessities for the satisfactions of both male and female for conduct a good life ,if any one interest goes against these psychology induced physiological needs definitely problems and diversion will come on their family relationships as they could not able to live together .To run mutual life in family male and female must be resemblance to attain the psychology induced physiological needs which would make furtherance their life in excellent ways .

Psychology of male and female must be integrated

In this case if they don't have uniform psychology it will create divisiveness and crevice between them, to avoid this situation both male and female must understand the eagerness and needs of every one in both psychological and physiological aspects .Once they are satisfied in both concepts they shall be living inseparably up to 100 age with the curiosity that they got from each other and keep thinking to possess always irrespective age symptom. Because affinity, affection and interest on each others are coming when they possess psychology induced physiological needs and interests ,without these relationships would not be cordial between male and female .At the same time if the male failure to cooperate with female's physiological interest she will be perverted in wrong path visversa ,each other have to surrender their interest to psychological and physiological motivation and imagination which will create so many interest and curiosity in attaining tasty life while they think about those .Since long back there are large and vast gap between the married couples in running the family system, that is happened especially due to not understanding openly each other innate feelings and needs at the time of they feel to attain physiological needs .It will not be coming only one time but it is eternal one and will be coming day by day on different pictures, according these pictures interest both male and female have to obey and understand .

In the family system interest, thoughts, characters and attitudes are varied according to each other that is a psychological influence ,in attaining common goal of family all psychology must be together and similarised without variations .If there is variations victory and goal will not be achieved ,in this way parents psychology will influence over children in positive ways to control their activities and husband and wife psychology will be matching to each other interest in carrying out family collective goals without inferior and superior thoughts .For entire prosperity the psychology and physiological behaviours of male and female are necessary to be integrated with an interest to keep cool their heart and quench their conjugal interest and curiosity .bud will get blossom as a flower if it is touched by air and water likewise family would be developed in the path of success and victory once husband and wife are possessed satisfactorily their physiological and psychological needs on mutual interest .

Unless this procedure was not followed in all the family system which would be broken down without solutions so, men and women have to obey to possess their psychological induced physiological needs in all the way of life irrespective of shyness, which will break the needful and necessary relations of the male and female life but they have to commit at possessing of those interest caused by the physiological patterns without shyness .Once male or female is failed to fulfil the needs of a female or male which arises at right time there would not be happy in their family system because, those same type of interest will not arising at their heart in next time so they must enjoy those interest timely for run efficient family system, psychology is an input of all the work ,with its helps all the outcomes are reflected in the society as an evidence of the psychology caused factors .So, family is consisting of so many factors which are caused by the psychological factors ,as a male and female have to associate with it without derail for attain good family system and god life .

Conclusion

Human being needless to live in an isolated way instead of living in a cohesive ways .In this aspects, in this contemporary period so many couples are living in a dissatisfied and isolated feelings because of not having same physiological and psychological capacity to understand each other's innate feelings, that must be encroached and absorbed suddenly when it comes and arises to each one and possessed by both fairly at smooth aspects. As a result of this study good family system is emerging out when male and female's innate desires are fulfilled by the both at mutual manner ,here they have to forget shyness, discipline, ethics and morality with an interest to let sprout their physiological interest to be harvested fully by both male and female at intensified interest and curiosity. Family is having numerous factors in terms of its development, among numerous factors these are the major factors which both male and female have to enjoy and harvest thoroughly for the family integrity and administrations. Psychology says to human being as to how to live with colourful imaginations and physiology says to how to harvest the colourful imaginations are caused by their psychology .This could be possessed and harvested if men and women have had matching interests and curiosity in their psychology induced imaginations.
